

Don't Talk to the Other Driver's Insurance after a Car Crash

Don't be tricked into jeopardizing your claim. Here's why you shouldn't talk to the other driver's insurance adjuster after a car crash.

Settle quickly

Adjusters want to find out how little it will cost to make you go away. They will tempt you with a quick, lowball settlement before you know fully what your injuries are and how much your claim is worth. Until you have a lawyer, they will be discounting the true value of your claim.

Pay little

When an adjuster calls you immediately after a crash, this usually means they know you have a case against them. The adjuster wants to pay as little as possible for your claim and contact you before you get a lawyer.

THE REAL REASON THEY ARE CALLING YOU.

Not your friend

The adjuster may seem friendly and sympathetic, but their goal is to close your claim as quickly and cheaply as possible.

RECORDED STATEMENT

Adjusters are trained to take your statement in a way that hurts your claim. They will try to get you to incriminate yourself, say something that weakens your case, or twist your words and use them against you later.

STOP

Don't risk it

Don't jeopardize your future or your family's wellbeing. The insurance company is not on your side—you need a professional who is. Get advice and guidance from an experienced attorney before talking to an adjuster or making any decisions about your case.

BEWARE

No lawyer

Insurance companies know they will have to pay you a lot more money if you hire a lawyer. The adjuster will try to convince you that you will lose money if you hire a lawyer, but it is not true, and they are not trying to help you by telling you so.
